Glover, Justice Spotlight Words of Hughes, King

Actors Danny Glover and Felix Justice will perform in "An Evening with Langston and Martin" on Monday, Jan. 19 at Cal State.

The two performers' portrayals of poet Langston Hughes and of Martin Luther King, Jr., is "a happy result of a long friendship on and off stage." Glover and Justice met in the San Francisco Bay Area early in their careers.

Played by Glover, Hughes is one of America's most respected writers and considered a literary leader in the Harlem Renaissance. In portraying King, Justice's performance spotlights the political and social leader's strengths as a writer and orator.

Glover, who is a native of San Francisco and went to San Francisco State University, trained at the Black Actors' Workshop of the American Conservatory Theatre. His performance in "Master Harold and the Boys" was the New York production that first brought him national attention. He played Moze in the Academy Award-winning film, "Places in the Heart," and also has starred in films like "The Color Purple," "Angels in the Outfield" and the "Lethal Weapon" series. He recently began shooting a fourth "Lethal Weapon" in Los Angeles.

Justice has been acting and directing for more than 30 years. In 1981, his one-man show on Martin Luther King, Jr., "Prophecy in America," premiered at the Hansberry Theatre in San Francisco and has been seen all over the U.S. and Africa since then. Justice grew up in South Carolina and studied acting in San Francisco and New York.

The 8 p.m. performance is in the Coussoulis Arena. Tickets are $25, which includes a reception following the show, $20 for reserved loge seating and $15 for general admission bleacher seating. Tickets are on sale at the Coussoulis Arena office, HP-121, at the Phenix Information Center, the Cal State A.S.I. Box Office and all ETM outlets, including at Hughes markets.

National Park Ranger Tracks the Ghosts of the Sierra Nevada

Retrace the paths of Indians, explorers, immigrants, industrialists and conservationists for a close look at their travels in the Sierra Nevada on Friday, Jan. 16. The free talk begins at 7 p.m.

National Park Service Ranger and associate professor of geography at Humboldt State University, Stephen Cunha, will tell the stories behind Walker's early crossing of the Sierra, the impact of hydraulic mining and logging, and the start of a movement to preserve the land. Cunha will illustrate his talk with slides from archives and also look at the old and new ties between the highlands and lowland California.

Earlier in the day, Cunha will address the politics of the High Pamirs in Tajikistan. The Pamirs, a close relative of the Himalayas, border embattled territories in China, Pakistan, Afghanistan, and the former Soviet Union. They are the scene of what's been called the "Great Game" -- the struggle for control over land that pastoralists, mountain farmers, soldiers and smugglers call home. The talk begins at 1:30 p.m.

For the campus location of the talks, call Jenny Zorn at Ext. 5520.

Counseling for Students, Staff, Public Now Available

The Community Counseling Center at Cal State is again making appointments for adults facing such issues as depression, traumatic life changes and eating disorders.

This confidential, one-on-one counseling, which also can cover self-esteem issues or simple desire to grow personally, is conducted by Cal State graduate students under the supervision of psychology department faculty. Edward Teyber, a Cal State psychology professor who has written a nationally-acclaimed book about children and divorce, serves as the center's director.

A $10 fee is charged for each 50-minute counseling session. However, the center does operate on a sliding scale.

The center focuses on counseling for individuals. Child, family and couples counseling is not available, although this year the center is offering its counseling service to students as well as the general public. Day or evening appointments may be scheduled. While the center does not treat drug or alcohol addiction or those who may be suicidal, referrals will be made in such cases.

For more information, call the Community Counseling Center at Ext. 5569.
